The two senators said during the midday break in the hearings Monday that staff work on the report had begun, even though several important witnesses had yet to be heard. They predicted it would offer suggestions for improvements in National Security Council operations and perhaps endorse the creation of a single congressional com-mittee to monitor intelligence agencies and covert operations.

But they knocked down the idea that the report would assess Mr. Reagan's responsibility for the affair or even go as far as the earlier Tower commission, appointed by Mr. Reagan, did in criticizing what it called the president's "management style."

A Foreign Ministry statement reported by the official Islamic Re-public News Agency said Iran's "principal stance" on the war and the presence of foreign forces in the Gulf was unchanged. In Baghdad, government officials said that Iraq viewed the Secu-rity Council order for an immediate cease-fire as a positive development. "Our primary impression regarding the text of the resolution is positive," an official told the Iraqi News Agency. He said Iraq would reply to the resolution after a meeting of the National Assembly, which Baghdad television reported would meet Wednesday.

In developments on the battlefield Tuesday, Iran said its forces repulsed two Iraqi assaults in the central and southern sectors, killing or wounding more than 900 lraqis. Iraq denied the claim.

Even before the Security Council spokesman, said the Reagan admen Monday and unanimously adopted the resolution, Iran rejected any UN measure that did not identify Iraq as the aggressor. Iran demands the removal of President Saddam Hussein of Iraq as a condition to end the war. Iraq invaded western Iran in September 1980 after border skirmishes.

The Iranian Foreign Ministry said that Iraqi attacks on ships had resulted in the presence of foreign forces in the Gulf. It said that issue was independent of the war. Iran said that the Security Council, by passing the resolution, had once again failed to perform its most important duty in preserving peace and international security. The Iranian statement, monitored in Nicosia, did not include any direct quotations. On Sunday, President Ali Khamenei, called the Security Council measure U.S.-influenced and worthless. In Baghdad, Mr. Hussein met

Tuesday with the Revolutionary Command Council and regional leaders of the governing Ba'ath Party to discuss the resolution. Diplomats said that Iraq, which has accepted previous council resolutions, was expected to accept the demand for a cease-fire since it corresponded with Iraq's demand for a comprehensive settlement. They said Baghdad would probably announce that it would abide by the resolution if Iran would.

Although the resolution does not contain an enforcement provision, it is stronger than previous resolutions calling for a truce. It is also designed to set the stage for a companion resolution, to be considered within two months, that would impose a worldwide arms embargo against either party that does not accede to the call for a cease-fire.

The United States was the driving force behind Monday's action, but the U.S. diplomatic effort was received with some resentment because of the Reagan administration's secret sale of arms to Iran. Many diplomats complained that the Americans' fervor for the UN initiative seemed an effort to undo the political damage to the United States from the arms sales. (AP, Reuters, NYT)

Price Rises Launch Hungary's Austerity

By Henry Kamm New York Times Service

BUDAPEST - Price increases on vital consumer commodities and services announced last week by the Hungarian government are part of an austerity program designed to reduce consumption in a country that has for years been consuming more than it produces.

The rises, which had been expected since before Karoly Grosz took office on June 25 as the new prime minister, are far-reaching. Under the increases, the price of flour and bread will go up by 19 percent, eigarettes by 20 percent, fuel oil by 29 percent, public heating by 12 percent, heating gas by 17 percent, electricity by 18 percent and gasoline and diesel oil by an average of 10 percent.

The increases were slightly offset by small rises in minimum pensions and benefits paid for children and students.

In a terse explanation, the government declared that the increases were necessary to reduce the imbalance between production and consumption, shrink the budget deficit and lower the subsidies paid by the 20vernment to make basic consumer goods available at less than economic prices.

The measures, although expected, are likely to deepen a discontent that has gripped Hungarians since the early 1980s, when their sense of economic well-being began turning sour. This followed the better part of a decade during which a classical Communist economy discovered the benefits of allowing some private entrepreneurship and making loans of hard currency available to stimulate a consumer economy.

Today, Hungary has the highest per capita debt of any Communist country, around $13 billion for a population of 10.6 million.

U.K. Plans Major Realignment of School Control

In line with her broader effort to apply market principles to many aspects of British society, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has proposed a package of far-reaching educational changes.

They include a national curriculum; mandatory testing at the ages of 7, 11 and 14; open enrollm with schools financed according to the number of students they attract, and a provision giving schools the right to put themselves under national, rather than local, financing and control.

According to Kenneth Baker, the secretary of state for education and science, the plan would "put an end to the system's monopoly" and would shift power from the producers to the consumers, from the education bureaucracy to parents.

Mrs. Thatcher calls the package "radical reform." Paddy Ashdown, mass producers as South Korea, the Liberal Party's spokesman on Taiwan and Hong Kong. Prices ducation, calls it "the flagship of have also dropped in the categories of steel and aluminum that Hunga-

TRAVEL UPDATE

Poland Protests Currency Transit Fees

WARSAW (Renters)—Political complained Tuesday that hard-currency transit fees and costoms duties levied on its tourists by Hungary and Yugoslavia were discriminatory and unjust. The government spokesman, Jerzy Urban, said that the Foreign Ministry had protested to both countries and asked them to treat Poles like other travelers.

The charges were introduced because of the number of Poles who carry goods to sell when they travel in neighboring countries. The official PAP news agency said Hungarian customs officers were levying transit feet, payable in Western money, of 30 percent of the value of goods taken into the country by Polish visitors.

Democrats Section for the section of the secti Should Focus On Economy, and the second s Leaders Say

By Paul Taylor and David S. Broder Washington Post Service .

Man de la company de la compan CLEVELAND - State chairmen of the Democratic Party say their candidates for the 1988 presidential race would be better off focusing on voters' concerns about the nation's economic future than on the Iran-contra affair.

With a year to go until their national convention, most say they doubt that "rule of law" and "decency in government" campaign appeals will retain a strong grip on the electorate's attention once the Iran-contra hearings fade from the television screen.

Those appeals were pivotal in Jimmy Carter's victory in the post-Watergate election of 1976, the Matagate election of 1976, the Democrats' only presidential victory of the past two decades.

"Nobody is going to carry Ohio talking about Iran-contra," said James Ruvolo, Ohio Democratic chairman and host to the meeting of the Association of State Demogratic Chairs last weekend. Fratic Chairs last weekend.

There will be 10 other issues before the first vote is cast in 1988 that will be more important," he said. "Jobs will be No. 1 and education will be No. 2, and everything else will be 10." Richard Wiener, head of the association and chairman of the Michigan Democratic Party, said the affair would "revive a cyclical tendency the public has not to trust Republicans," but most of his colleagues characterized the likely damage to the Republicans more modestly: as eliminating a positive rather than creating a negative.

"It has taken some of the glow away from Reagan," said Peter Kelly, chairman of the California Democratic Party, "and without that happening, whoever the Re-publicans nominated could have .rum a 'four-more-years' campaign."

State party chairmen who partic-ipated in a group discussion split generally along regional lines over how their candidates should craft Vtheir economic appeals - and their differences suggest that an economy with pockets of strength and weakness will complicate the "out" party's efforts to fashion a single economic message.

Chairmen from Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania, where economies are shifting away from heavy industry, said that candidates could carry their states talking about an activist government with new programs to take on the problems of job loss. But party leaders in the Southern and Sun Belt states flinched at the notion of metoric that sounds too gloomy or policies that seem too expensive.

"People don't want to hear that in North Carolina," said Linda.
Ashendorf, vice chairman of that state's Democratic Party, as col-leagues from Florida, California and New Jersey nodded in agreement. "The cities in my state have a 2 or 3 percent unemployment rate.

The people still want to hear that it's morning again in America."
Perhaps because they are unsure of the right tone, the leaders said they think their greatest strength in 1988 will be the "messenger, not the message" — this despite the current lack of national stature by all of their candidates except the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson.

"Look how long it took the American people to embrace Oliie North," said Larry Yatch, chair-man of the Pennsylvania party. "All of four days."

"The people want a tough, strong, take-charge individual, and from our talented field, someone will break out," said Laurence Kirwan, New York chairman. Although eight announced or prospective presidential candidates gave speeches to the gathering last weekend, and the event received saturation coverage in the local news media, interviews with voters in ticket-splitting neighborhoods in and around Cleveland immediately afterward showed how clean a slate most of the candidates really are. "There's still a year to go," said Shirley Siemer, an accountant from Fairview Park, west of Cleveland, defending her inability to name any of the Democratic candidates. "I figure I've got plenty of time to watch them all on TV."

Mr. Jackson was the only one Mr. Jackson was the only one who drew anything beyond blank stares or shrugs — and his notices in Cleveland's 11th Ward, an ethnic area on the eastern edge of the city, were nothing to brag about. "I may be a little prejudiced, but he seems like a cocky so-and-so," said

Attacks by Pit Bulls Stir Clamor for Laws

Many cities and states, prompted by reports of pit bull attacks on people, are moving to ban or regulate the dogs, The New York Times reports. Officials who work with animals say it is the heaviest legal assault on a specific breed they can recall.

The term pit bull refers to a range of dogs with squat, muscular bodies and steel-trap jaws, descendants of the fighting bull-dogs of 19th-century England. Known either as pit bull terriers or Staffordshire terriers, they were bred by crossing the buildog with a terrier, possibly the fox terrier or one of the old breeds known as the white English or the black-and-tan terrier. Pit bulls have a genetic history of being bred for combat with other animals or other dogs.
The Humane Society of the United States says that since July 1983, pit bulls have been responsible for 20 of the 28 dog-bite deaths in the country, including all five this year, although they account for perhaps only one of every 100 American dogs. The society says that largely because of pit bulls, it has received inquiries from more than 600 communities about animal-control ordinances. But because of legal challenges, only about 10 of some 40 breed-specific laws are still on the books. Many breeders say that properly trained pit bulls are no more dangerous than German shepherds or Doberman pinschers.

"We're seeing a growing pro-pensity to have mean dogs in an age when we're increasingly distrustful of law enforcement, said a Humane Society spokes-woman. "But we're also seeing the general public less willing to put up with people who are unwilling to restrain their danger-ous animals. Your right to own a vicious dog stops at my throat."

Short Takes

Of the more than 400 native anguages spoken in North America before the Europeans arrived, half have disappeared. A few are thirving, including Navajo, Eskimo and Chippewa. Many others are endangered, like Arapaho, with only a dozen speakers still living. But on the Kickapoo reservation in Kansas, a federal grant of $143,000 is enabling 93 achool pupils to study Kickapoo and take it home to revive among their elders. "They talk Kickapoo with the grandparents," said Debbie Wahwassuck, a school board

ERSATZ HEMINGWAY - Jack Waterbury, 57, of Key West, Florida, held up a mackerel and a barracuda that he caught after winning an Ernest Hemingway look-alike contest last weekend in Key West. The contest was held at a bar frequented by the writer.

The winning side actually gets an average of 71 cents for each dollar awarded by juries, according to a study by Rand Corp., a California think tank. It said the bigger the verdict, the likelier its reduction as a result of post-trial motions, appeals or negotiation. Two-fifths of jury verdicts of $10 million or more were cut, as were one-third of verdicts of more than $1 million. But only 10 percent of awards of less than $100,000 and 20 percent of those from $100,000 to $1 million were reduced. Rand did not deduct lawyers' fees, which run to a third or more of the final payout.

New, rebuilt and graffiti-fre subway cars are attracting more riders, New York City's Transit Authority reports. The agency, halfway through a $12.4 billion member, "and our generation transit-rebuilding program, said the subways averaged 3,661,000 weekday riders at $1 a fare through May, up 3.4 percent from a year earlier. It was the highest ridership since 1974, when the fare was 35 cents, but far below the years after World War II, when eight million peo-ple a day paid a five-cent subway

> A smaller proportion of Americans are going on picnics. In 1965, 60 percent of the people surveyed by the University of Maryland said they had pic-nicked in the preceding year. In 1982 and 1983, only 48 percent of those surveyed had done so. sociologists attribute this to the rise of fast-food restaurants, smaller families, more people living alone and the growth of such competing activities as jogging. -ARTHUR HIGBEE

But while the approach has indeed saved companies money, it has also created problems.

The system has produced a resentful class of workers who in some cases are taking their hostility out on customers. It has generated friction between lower- and higher-paid employees. And at a time when unions have been on the defensive, the system has sparked a new wave of militancy.

As a result, companies are becoming more cautious about embracing two-tier pay structures. Even companies that have adopted lower pay scales are having second thoughts. Many, including American Airlines and Giant Foods Inc., attract new ones.

Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah elicited such an exchange suggests that he came to understand the futility of this exercise. from Rear Admiral John Poindexter on Monday a statement that the decision to explore an opening to Iran I) was the president's and 2) was the product of serious study and review. Evidently Mr. Hatch meant to be establishing Mr. Reagan's capacity for staying on top of policy in his own government. Actually he was establishing the president's responsibility for the basic flaw of the Iran-contra affair, the source from which all else flowed.

Of course, it was reasonable for the U.S. government to be looking to establish a better relationship with Iran in time and to explore any openings toward moderation that were possible. But the judgment made and the arrangements entered into on the basis of having read some of the most exploitative elements in Iran as "moder-ates" all but define the problem. It was thought that if these fake moderates were carefully cultivated, they could either (depending on your reading of the president's purpose) produce the hostages or restore a hostile Iran to a political and strategic situation consistent with the American interest. At this point it should be evident that the narrower purpose, of dealing with certain elements in Tehran in order to get back the bostages, was quickly discredited. The few hostages who were released were quickly replaced by new Americans seized in Lebanon. That Admiral Poindexter destroyed the presidential finding which authorized

The United States was not able to make a good test of the broader purpose of the Iran opening, to explore avenues for moderating Iranian policy. But a full-fledged test subsequently was made by France — to which, by the way, Ayatoliah Ruhollah Khomeini owed a great debt for its hospitality in his years of exile. As Flora Lewis of The New York Times usefully recalls ("With Iran, Shady Deals Don't Pay," IHT, July 21), the French, seeking to "normalize" relations with Iran, kicked out another Iranian exile, a rival to the ayatollah, and settled a third of a billion dollars upon Iran in partial repayment of an old loan. The Iranians responded by giving refuge in their Paris embassy to an embassy translator (not a diplomat) wanted for questioning in last year's terrible bombings in Paris, and it was this that triggered the current explosive

In light of the centrality of the opening to Tehran, it is especially unfortunate that the congressional committees apparently do not intend publicly to question Michael Ledeen. As the first American to discuss an opening to Iran with the Israelis and the first to meet with a supposedly moderate Iranian, Man-ucher Ghorbanilar, Mr. Ledeen is in a unique position to inform Congress about the launching of the policy whose crash is absorbing its attention day after day.

Reflag the Satellites?

many American space cargoes. Into the vacuum created by NASA's mismanagement the Soviet Union has now stepped with an offer to launch American communications satellites at cut-rate prices. Can the United States afford to accept it?

For commercial users of space, the offer is almost too good to be true. To put a two-ton communications satellite into geosynchro-nous orbit, the Russians ask 530 million, about half the going rate. They promise full confidentiality and competitive rates on in-surance, "Your Fast Track to the Stars," runs the ad for the Soviet Proton rocket service.

Launching so many of their own satellites probably creates economies of scale permitting the Soviet Union to offer such cheap rates without great loss. It gains hard currency and visibility abroad. Launching American satellites highlights its strength and America's weakness.

That is why the State Department is strongly tempted to block the idea, by invoking a law that bans transfer of satellite technology to the Soviet Union. Another reason is that American rocket makers hope to offer commercial launch services when they resume production in a few years. Users may by then have come to expect rock-bottom Soviet rocket prices.

On the other hand, it is hard to deny

With the space shuttle grounded, so are American space users the benefit of so cheap a service. The Russians could probably learn little of value from launching American communications satellites, provided they give acceptable guarantees not to pry into the launch packages.

The United States landed in this dile because for years both the executive and Congress neglected NASA's disastrous space policy. The space agency wanted, above all, to advance the space shuttle. It discouraged further production of most expendable rockets, forcing everyone to put all his space eggs in the shuttle basket. That left no transport at all after the Challenger disaster.

Both military and commercial space activities could have been crippled by NASA's ploy. But so far the reconnaissance satellites already in orbit have sufficed, and fiber optics have reduced the expected need for communications satellites. America's situaiion is not so desperate; it can take or leave the Soviet offer. The decision can turn on the state of Soviet-American relations when Moscow makes a specific launch offer.

To be faced with the dilemma at all shows how minimally NASA's shuttle policy has served the national interest. More vigorous efforts to foster a commercial launch industry would be the best way to prevent more such embarrassment.

Against the Fear Iran Inspires

Ought America to undertake the risks attendant on naval intervention in the Gulf for what may prove at best a purely symbolic victory? If the convoying succeeds, the benefits that accrue may prove very large. Iran exercises the influence it does in the Gulf region by fear alone, a fear fueled by the military menace it levels at its weaker Arab neighbors. That menace is trivial when set against the force available to all the non-Gulf states it has succeeded, by its egomaniacal conduct, in making its enemies. They include not only France, Britain and the United States, but the Soviet Union, Iran has painted itself diplomatically into a corner, yet continues to behave like a regional, and lawless, superpower. If a real superpower now explodes its preten-sions, the result will be of benefit to the whole region, to the principle of free navi-gation everywhere and to Soviet-American relations at a critical moment.

- The Daily Telegraph (London).

The concern at the United Nations would have been more wonderful and deeply moving if it had emerged rather earlier than 82 months after the war began. So long as Iraqis and Iranians were rerunning the First World War at greater length than the Second on their own ground, that was nobody else's business (except for arms sup-pliers and assorted meddlers). But only when Iranians looked like winning, with profound implications for the surrounding region and the world at large, did the world's leading powers unite in an anxious call for an end to seven years of slaughter, - The Guardian (London).

Portugal Votes for Stability

Just over half the Portuguese who voted lent their support to the center-right Social Democrats led by Anibal Cavaco Silva. Mr. Cavaco will now be able to form a majority, one-party administration. The Portuguese have not only observed the need for a period of stability, they have done some-thing rarer: voted to bring one about. Mr. Cavaco's mixture of cheerless prophecies and self-congratulation has won him a remarkable victory. But although he certainly deserved credit for restoring the confidence of investors in Portugal during his term as prime minister, the rapid expansion of the economy during the last 18 months also owes much to a fall in the value of the dollar and of oil. His new term of office may not be attended by such good fortune. There is, however, a good chance that it will be longer, and that in itself is good for Portugal. — The Independent (London).

The victory of the Social Democratic Party led by Anibal Cavaco Silva is a famous one by any standard. It is the first time, not only since the 1974 Revolution put an end to 48 years of right-wing dictatorship, but this century, that a democratically elected political party has won an overall parliamentary majority. Portugal has at last been given the political stability that will permit its still relatively backward economy to be modernized and to become fully competitive within the European Community.

Colorful, but Damning

Among the many witnesses expected to testify during the hearings into the Irancontra arms scandal, Robert Owen was not initially regarded as a major actor. But he has provided details about a covert operation that reached from darkened street corners into the White House itself.

Mr. Owen described bow he moved back and forth between working officially for the Reagan administration and serving unofficially as Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North's courier to the contra rebels in Nicaragua, taking them everything from money to maps to medicine to arms. The game was exciting, to hear Mr. Owen tell it. Exciting but illegal.

We were struck by the similarity between Mr. Owen's testimony and the oclorful detail provided by another minor character in the Watergate hearings, Anthony Ulasewicz, A retired New York police detective who acted as a bagman for the Nixon administration's plumbers unit, Mr. Ulasewicz was regarded as little more than comic relief when he testified before a Senate committee. But the colorful activities he described would, ultimately, help bring down a president.

WASHINGTON — "When you live among wolves, you must how like a wolf," Lexin wrote in 1921, justifying business partnerships with the "imperialist bandits" of the West as indispensable to Russia's economic resurrection from the ravages of revolution and war. He argued that "these retreats to state capitalism" are indispensable to secure the means of production and commodities so that "we shall stand so firmly on our own feet that no capitalist enemies can overawe us."

Under the seemingly more self-assured glow of glasmost, Soviet leaders may have come full circle. They are again contemplating the strategic possibilities of commercial partner-ships with the West — now less for reasons of national metamorphosis and survival than for simple economic advantage.

Most promising for American business is the Soviet Union's developing interest in joint ventures with the West. These were discussed when, with other directors of the Council on Foreign Relations in New York, I visited Moscow last February and met General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev and other officials.

Vladimir Kamentsev, deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers and chairman of the Commission on External Economic Aslairs, explained that the new policy responds to disap-pointment with the Ministry of Foreign Trade's record in promoting exports. Even trade in basic exports such as fuel, coal, gas and timber has weakened. Indeed, the role of exports in the By Charles McC. Mathias Jr.

the economy in general is seen as out of balance. The government realizes that it is not efficient for the Soviet Union to produce everything. It would make more sense to have some imports that can be more economically produced elsewhere. As a result, more than 20 ministries and offices, along with 67 large enterprises, have been given direct access to foreign markets. Where appropriate, special firms have been created to pursue foreign trade activities.

To date, most of the activity has involved drafting administrative measures. Putting these measures to work by plant managers is next. Indeed, encouraging plant managers is central to the new plans. Years ago, the drain on plant resources and the red tape involved in production for export made it enpopular with Soviet plant managers, and they would light off export orders. Now there is a special tax rate for earnings in foreign ex-change — specifically in dollars — creating realis-tic, effective incentives. Soviet managers will now have to fight to get such orders.

A typical joint venture will be structured with a 51 percent Soviet share and 49 percent foreign licipation. Foreign capital contributions may include know-how, equipment, technology and similar assets. The Soviet capital contribution may include real estate, buildings and the labor force.

All ventures will be based in the Soviet Union.
These ventures would produce for both the domestic and foreign markets. At present, the Soviets are using much of their convertible currency to buy equipment. Their goal is eventually to produce such equipment themselves and reduce the drain on foreign exchange. The Soviet Union will not provide foreign currency to finance joint ventures. Neither will joint ventures interfere with the country's overall planning or operations. If, on the other hand, a venture is able to earn foreign currency, there will be no tax on a partner's share when it is reinvested. Any surplus can be transferred out of the country and will be taxed at a rate of 30 percent after the first two years.

An example of such an enterprise is the Soviet-lapanese venture to produce "marine beef" out of fish. The plan is to market half the production domestically and the other half abroad. Mr. Kamentsev estimates that all capital will be recovered in about five years.

The Finance Ministry can reduce tax rates and provide other incentives to joint ventures. The only requirement is that such economic cooperation must be mutually beneficial.

In order to integrate the controlled prices of a planned economy with the market prices of a free-enterprise economy, the Foreign Trade Ministry will buy the products of a joint venture just as if they were those of an ordinary private customer. It will pay the full world market price. If the purchase is made for resale in domestic markets, the product will be priced at a fixed sum that reflects social goals, with the difference representing a state subsidy. And a joint venture will have the freedom to determine where it will purchase its raw materials and other supplies.

The cost of labor will be determined at prevailing Soviet rates. Labor questions will be settled in accordance with Soviet labor law.

accordance with Soviet labor law.

In 1985, echoing Lenin's argument (but for a vastly changed country), Mr. Gorbachev told an American trade delegation: "If we are to have genuinely stable and enduring relationships capable of ensuring a lasting peace, they should be based, among other things, on well-developed business relationships."

In joint ventures, Soviet planners have constructed, on paper at least, an interesting amalgam of capitalist opportunities within socialist necessities. Whether or not the experiment is the seed of ties. Whether or not the experiment is the seed of Mikhail Gorbachev's "enduring relationships" or simply a revisiting of Lenin's "necessary retreat" to capitalism, it will make for interesting business.

The program's success should not be taken for granted. But Moscow seems determined to make it work, and is anxious for the foreign exchange and technology it may attract. This may not guarantee quick profits, but it justifies cranking up the cor-porate jet for a flight to Moscow to assess the otential for doing business in a new environment.

The writer, who now practices law, is a former Republican senator from Maryland. He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

A U.S. Negotiator: Has Gorbachev Changed His Mind?

WASHINGTON - In recent days, Soviet officials, most notably my Geneva counterpart, Yuli M. Vorontsov, have accused the United States of erecting last-minute obstaales to an agreement on intermediate-range nuclear forces, or INF. (See "In Moscow, Impatience on Missiles," IHT July 15, by Yuli M. Vorontsov.) There are new obstacles, but they are not due to American positions. Our positions are consistent with principles we have espoused since INF negotiations began in 1981, and repre-sent a fair, balanced treatment of the rights and interests of both sides. The

For Kuwait to Lower Its Flag

Is a Blow to the Arab Spirit

One must ask, who is crecting lastminute obstacles to agreement?

Another Soviet "obstacle" concerns the matter of conversion - physically changing a missile limited by a treaty to another type of missile. Let me note that if Moscow agreed to our proposal for the global elimination of INF missiles (longer range and shorter range), one key type of conversion becomes impossible: shorter-range American Pershing-1Bs, to which Pershing-2s could be converted, would be banned.

Since the Soviets have not yet accepted that proposal, our draft treaty pro-vides that those INF missiles scheduled for elimination be destroyed or converted. Both sides would have the right to choose how they eliminate their missiles. Either way, the systems would cease to exist, the other side could verify it by on-site inspection. Conversion has long been an accepted means of meeting arms control limits. If the Soviets for some reason do not want to permit conversion in this case, we can deal with the problem by going to zero.

A third "obstacle" concerns location: where the United States would be al-where the Omiso states would be al-lowed to deploy its remaining 100 long-er-range INF missiles after the conclu-sion of a treaty (assuming we do not go down to zero). The Soviets want to bar U.S. deployment in Alaska, since mis-siles there could reach Soviet territory. This issue arises only because the Soviets insist that both sides retain 100 warheads on these missiles rather than eliminate them, as America and virtually every other country outside the War-saw Pact would prefer. With zero, the problem would disappear.

Because of the range, mobility and transportability of the SS-20s, their deployment anywhere in Soviet Asia constitutes a threat to our allies in Asia and Europe, which we consider equivalent to a threat against ourselves. We cannot agree to bar the United States from countering such a Soviet threat. Mr. Gorbachev, in proposing at Reyk-javik that our 100 be in the United States, did not mention Alaska, so again the question arises of just who is raising last-minute obstacles. Mr. Gorbachev stated recently that the Soviet Union is, in fact, ready to eliminate the final 100 INF warheads and invoke the "zero option," but only if the United States removes its muclear-capable aircraft from the Far East. But what we are negotiating is inter-mediate range missiles, and the United States has no INF missiles in the Far East. The nuclear-capable aircraft he would have us remove are dwarfed in number by Soviet nuclear-capable aircraft, which would not be limited by

Mr. Gorbachev's proposal. Finally, the Soviets claim that Japan does not permit torbute.

NATO is trying to undermine an INF agreement, by modernizing its remaining nuclear stockpile and by linking INF to battlefield nuclear verpons and conventional forces.

With regard to the former, NATO decided in 1983 to reduce unilaterally its stockpile of nuclear weapons in Europe to 4,600, the lowest level in decades, and to modernize the remaining arsenal to ensure that NATO retained a robust deterrent. So NATO decided not upon a buildup, as the

As for linkages, it is the Soviets who have insisted on linking an INF greement to accords in other areas, and America that has argued for concluding an INF pact with no linkages. That remains our position.

The United States has continually been the side that pressed the pace in these negotiations. We were the first to call for negotiations; we had the first proposal on the table when they began n 1981, and the first when they resumed in 1985 after the Soviet walkout. We were the first side to table a draft INF treaty on the basis of the Reykjavik guidelines, and we continue to push ahead as our two sides work to complete a joint treaty text.

Unfortunately, the Soviets seem to be putting on the brakes. They have raised the last-minute issue of the German Persbings and have held back vital details of their position on verification. Not only have they have refused to face up to the key remaining issues in INF, they are not addressing START reductions or seriously facing the other cen-tral elements in our relationship, such as laman rights and regional issues. We remain committed to conclud-ing verifiable arms reduction agreements in Geneva as soon as it can be done. We are ready to address remaining issues in a constructive manner. But we must ensure that, in our desire for accords, we do not succemb to last-minute Soviet tactics designed to produce agreements not in our security interests. The Soviets should not miscalculate. Our position is based on wellconsidered and long-held principles. It is the result of extensive consultations with friends and allies. We will not be diverted from our approach. I am pleased that my Soviet col-league offered his views to an American audience and that our press printed those views. I intend to offer my views to the Soviet press for publication and hope they will reciprocate.

The Contras Will Come To Nothing

By William Pfaff

P ARIS — It is not only the generals who are a war behind. Officials, politicisms, and policy makers just as often are trying to win some battle long ago lost. Exactly this lay behind a the Iran-contra affair. It is a problems, good deal more urgest than the back-neyed questions of what the president knew and when — questions which now scarcely need so be asked.

People commonly are shaped by decisive historical events in their youth. The failure of the Warner youth. The failure of the Western powers to resist Hitler at Munich mutivated U.S. policy makers of the following generation to stand up to what they identified, or misidentified, as Hitlerian threats through the 1950s and 60s. Ronald Reagan and William Casey, old men, were still doing it in Micaraou men, were sun oung it an interesting it.

World War II, says, "Bill Case," problem was that the CIA was not the OSS. The wartime Office of Strategic Services fought when moral and political choices were plain and Americans.
had no doubt about their cause. The people who collaborated with the OSS were the best of their generation.

The CIA, when it began, still fur tioned in a morally uncomplicated landscape, that of Stalinism, but the political conditions in which it worked had become transformed. This is illustrated by the case of Radio Free Europe, which the CIA created as the Cold War took form. It was meant to become what the Albed radio stations. broadcasting to occupied Europe had been. Exiled cabinet ministers, mitch lectuals and refugee leaders of non-Communist political parties broadcast what they, or their equivalents, had said during the war. Resist, refuse to collaborate, organize, rely on the West — wait for the liberation.

There was no liberation to come. There was only embarrassment and hypocrisy in the West when the East, Germans rebelled in 1953, and when a successful revolution took place is Hungary in 1936. The Western governments cleared their throats and eriments cleared their throats and said, in effect: Well, that was very brave, but you really shouldn't have made the Russians angry, and you mustin't look to us for help because if we were to do anything it could be very dangerous for us and for you.

Virtually every time the CIA tried to act as the OSS had, it found their realizes presentiable reconstructed.

act as the OSS had, it found their making unsustainable promises, and eventually betraying those who gave it their tress. The U.S. administration in power would discover its secret wins going nowhere, ceasing to be secret, provoking opposition at home, and nurting other policies being pressed—and so it would call them off.

The agency found that its collaborators were not so often the selliess patriots of the war years. Some were beroes. More w marginals. The best collaborators Mr. Casey and Lieutenant Colonel North could find for their Iranian operation included an officer who had retired under an ethical cloud, his Iranian business partner, who de-clares that he was in it for the money, and an Iranian fixer whom the CIA considers to be a list. The CIA officer quoted above says of the contras: "They're our equiva-lent for Central America of Franklin |} Roosevelt's WPA," or Works Progress Administration, the '30s job program. The contras give hungry peasant kids a chance to make some money. There are risks, but what do those kids know about what they are getting into?

The contras sooner or later will go the way of past U.S. supported guer-rillas in the Ukraine, Albania, Tibet, China, Indochina and too many other places. The American public will not go to war to put the contras in power; and they will prove unable to. scize power alone. A lot of bloodlet-ting will end in nothing.

Mr. Casey's project for a privately owned "self-sustaining, stand-alone" secret service, and his willingness to go along with arms sales to Iran even though Iran was not freeing hostages, all in order to raise money to pay for the comma "enterprise," amounted to trying to recreate an OSS to do what he could not make the CIA do. Yet the reason the CIA disappointed him is that 1987 is not 1942. Mikhail Gorbechev is not Adolf Hitler. Nicaragua is not Vietnam. It is not occupied France nor is at Czechoslovakia invaded by the Wehrmacht. History is a dangerous counselor if you have lost track of the passage of time, and fail to acknowledge that history is process—that then is not now. Policies conceived in terms of yesterday's failures merely open the way to failure again. tternational Herold Tribum

When Attorney and floated out to Alcatraz.

Thus was Alcatraz theatrically inaugurated as a federal "correctional and its emphasis on retribution rather facility." But it was one that had nothing to do with correction. It had much the closing pained J. Edgar Hoover to do with the glorification of J. Edgar probably pleased Mr. Kennedy. Hoover, who understood that when

Small (22 acres) and barren (all the topsoil was brought from the mainland), Agairaz is a peoble in a platinum setning, an eruption of grimness in the fore-ground of a sparkling city. The prison was an American oddity because it fore-swore hopes for prisoner rehabilitation. This history of penology illuminates the history of social theory. Writing in American Heritage, Roger Pray notes that prisons (other than those for political prisoners - the Bastille, the Tower of London) are an American invention. Before prisons, crimes were redressed by financial, corporal or capital punishment. Philadelphia's Walnut Street prison, the first, was a product of Quaker humanitarianism and American liberalism. It reflected the faith that colonial Calvinists were wrong: Man is not basi- tors on a walking tour of a place that cally deprayed, and even the bad can be can be chilly on a July morning, and rehabilitated in an environment structure must have been unimaginably cold on tured by the new science of penology.

Penology's original optimistic pre-mise that behavioral changes can be programmed produced a quasi-medical approach to the "treatment" of prisoners. This tendency was strengthened by the newfound faith, now much diminished. in the ability to measure personal qualises and behavioral tendencies.

The new science was used to justify vast discretion for "correctional experts" in administering sentences, pris-ons, parole and probation. This discretion reduced prisoners to the status of laboratory creatures, playthings of theorists. Alcatraz at least had the virtue of treating its prisoners as free moral agents—as bad people, but people.

Alcairaz was the prison system's "big stick." It was not for the most dangerous criminals; it was for the system's most difficult inmates. The hanning horns of passing ships, the rasping calls of swooping sea gulls, the mosning of the service. He is a formation of information about the history of Alcatraz back to its pre-Civil War role as a fort, and he brings an attractive moral seriousness to the task of historic preservation. He is offended by the "Alcatraz Swim Team" sweatshirts sold along Fisherman's Warf. On the hard ground of Alcatraz, hard men were made to suller because they had made others suffer, It is, he thinks, disrespectful of all participants in this moral drama - to the brutal as well as their victims - to treat this place as an amusement. In a fine use of oral history, the Park Service taped 80 hours of conversations with former guards and immates (in-cluding the 82-year-old who remem-bers "Machine Gum" Kelley as a bore). As they listen to the tapes, the only sound is the shuffle of shoes echoing through the cell blocks. The visitors emerge blinking and drawing deep breaths to dispel the sense of being buried alive - which was, after all, the point of Alcatraz.

The Reviewer You Read Is Badly Read

LOS ANGELES - After having been for a good part of my life a well read person, I am now a badly read person. This would not be much to announce except that the change took place five years ago and coincided with my becoming a hook critic.

It is a well known or at least a much propagated fact that nobody hates war as generals do, whether because they have fought one and know it to be hell, like Sherman, or because they haven't fought one and worry about the wear and tear on weapons, budgets and textbook tactics. What is less well known largely, of course, because it occurs in a far more obscure occupation -- is that no one reads less than book reviewers.

Or so it seems, When I was doing other things, I was aware mainly of the books I had read or was about to read. For the last five years I have been continually aware of the books I have not read and shall never get a chance to read. It never used to be that everyone I met would ask: What do you think of the latest Piercy, or Oates, or Robert Hughes on Australia? Now they do and I answer, "I don't know, I haven't read them."

By Richard Eder

Answering "I don't know" on a daily basis does little for one's self-esteem. Ask someone who has spent a life as a professional fisherman if he doesn't get sick of catching fish and the answer is likely to be, "It's the fish I don't catch books that pour in, 50 or 60 each week. This is not in itself a major problem, except physically. Still, publishers seem to have discarded their more impregnable and life-threatening forms of packaging, and a couple of libraries are happy to cart away the gross accumulations. In fact, it is no real pain but something of a relief to open a package and find things that make no conceivable demands, such as the following: "Blood in the Streets: Investment Profits in a World Gone Mad" by James Dale Davidson and Sir William Rees-Mogg. A sort of Chicken Little guide for skywatching, it can safely be ignored by your

Among them: Lavinia, Duchess of Norfolk, with Muffin, Mishka, Musti, Molly, Mitzi, Millie, Mumbo, Bessie and Lara. That list of dogs was fun to do. It could be 10 times as long and still be fun to do, although nobody would want to read it. But I have another list, and this one hurts: "Mary and the Giant" by Philip Dick. An early and revealing novel by this later master of what we too narrowly categorize as science fiction.

"Tremor" by Adam Zagajewski. A brief selection from one of Poland's leading poets. An example of what is uncommon and precious: poetry erupting out of sheer need.

"Herself in Love" by Marianne Wiggins. A collection of short stories by a povelist of large imagination and wit. She wrote a splendid novel two years ago. What is she up to now?
"More Die of Heartbreak" by Saul

Bellow. Of course. "The Embarrassment of Riches" by Simon Schama. A study of Dutch culture in the 17th century that - to use the language common to human-being readers and to reviewers who are off-duty-sounds absolutely terrific. All of these are books that, for one reason or another, I will not review. I failed to get a copy early enough to fit the schedule. Or I was on vacation when the book came out. Or I didn't have the wit to realize its interest. Or simply, and most commonly: A program of two rethe books themselves, really, because others will review them. It is the reviewer who feels deprived, like an orphan. . Or like the midwife excluded from her calling. Certainly the book will be delivered, but doesn't it need my own particular wit, compassion or anger to be delivered properly?

Aside from not reviewing these books, I haven't even read them. I want to read them all. Taken up with new candidates, I shall read only some. A growing num-ber line my office walls. Each month I grow more badly read.

By enacting a large body of business legislation, approving many bi-lateral and multilateral economic trea-ties and strengthening domestic legal institutions, the People's Republic has established much of the infrastructure that such cooperation requires. More than 8,000 contracts have been concluded, authorizing more than $20 billion in foreign investment. Roughly $7 billion of that has already been transferred to China. Although some projects have foundered, often amid publicity, many others have flourished in silence. To be sure, authorized investment dropped last year by some 50 percent, but much of that was attributable to the failure to find commercial oil reserves offshore and to China's efforts to discourage construction of more hotels while encouraging manufacturing enterprises. Asked about Moscow's proposa for superpower talks on the Gulf, Mr. Fitzwater said: "The president sent his letters to the UN countries indicating he thought that was the appropriate forum in which to con-sider this issue, especially at this time, and we still think that is the proper forum."

In another development, it was announced in Paris that the French Navy would provide a military es-cort for two of its oil tankers sailing in the Gulf this week.

"We have two objectives: the preservation of our economic interests in the region and the safety of our ships and their crews," said the minister for muritime affairs, Ambroise Guellec. France, which cut off diplomatic relations with Iran on Friday, warned its ships on Monday to avoid the Gulf. Defense Minister André Giraud said last week that France did not have the military capability to pro-vide escorts for its ships in the It was not known why the French government changed its mind, but Western diplomatic sources said the decision was probably linked to the crisis in relations tween France and Iran. France and Iran are involved in a dispute over the refusal of an Iranian official to leave Tehran's embas sy to face questioning in connec-tion with a series of terrorist bombings in Paris last year. A French container ship, the Ville d'Anvers, was attacked by Iranian gunships in the Gulf on July 13. Defense Ministry sources

In Loudon, Kuwait's minister of state for foreign affairs, Saad Mo-hammed al-Osaimy, repeated a government request that Britain join the United States in reflagging Kuwaiti tankers.

The request, and what was seen as a somewhat noncommittal official British reply, led to sharp questioning Tuesday afternoon of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Parliament, She declined to pledge that her government would not consider reflagging requests on a ship-by-ship basis.

Mrs. Thatcher said that ships applying for British "registration" would be subject to the "ordinary conditions' for such applications. Those conditions include comliance with maintenance and safespecifications. Anyone who wants to register a ship under the British flag must also maintain a nese restaurants, ice cream parlors registered place of business in the United Kingdom.

Living Abroad

British Law, in Plain English

By Sherry Buchanan

LONDON - A new release for the expatriate's bookshelf is New to the U.K.: A Guide to Your Life and Rights," by Gene-viewe Muinzer, (Routledge & Kegan Panl, New York, 1987). A layman's guide to the British legal system, it deals with prob-lems foreigners living in Britain encounter, such as how to get a work permit, where to get divorced, what type of insurance to get, what to do if you're arrested and how to make a will.

"Few people know anything about the British legal system when they arrive," said Ms. Munizer, a Princeton University graduate who got her law degree at the University of Warwick and qualified as a solicitor. "It is hard to find answers to these problems because there is no central resource to go to, said Ms. Mminzer, who has lived in London for 10 years. "That's why the horror stories get perpetusted year after year.

The book is the result of interviews with 600 expatriates from 29 countries, as well as 300 British legal experts, accountants

The first thing foreigners, es-pecially Americans, have to real-ize about the British legal system is that there are no "contingency" provisions, in which a lawyer's fees are paid only if the case is won. In spite of pressures introduce the practice, Ms. Muinzer does not anticipate a change in current procedu

Not only are lawyers' fees required but, according to the "indemnity rule," the person who

According to Ms. Muinzer's estimates, solicitor's fees range from £80 to £200 ($128 to $320) per hour at 2 City firm; £45 to £100 in a large provincial firm; and £25 to £60 in a small provincial firm. But there is an alternative to to the British legal system. This consists of tribunals, which are quicker, cheaper and less formal than the courts." Ms. Muinzer writes, and where nobody needs a lawyer. Tribunals deal with cases such as immigration and welfare appeals.

An interesting point to note, she says, is that "no matter how short a time you have been living in the U.K., legal aid organizations will still give you assis-tance." You also are eligible for legal aid benefits. Although it is common knowledge that work permits are in-creasingly difficult to get, Ms. Mainzer points out that there are certain categories of foreigners who need only an entry clearance to work in Britain.

These include the wife, but not all or part of the winner's legal holds a work permit; the sol fice of a foreign firm; a member of a recognized foreign news agency; any private servant of a olomat; and anyone working for a foreign government that is recognized by Britain.

Entry clearance is obtained through the British Embassy or the high commissioner's office before the traveler departs for Britain; work petraits are obtained by the prospective emment of Employment -

When it comes to getting a divorce, the quickest and cheapest divorce a couple can get in England usually takes three to four months and costs shoot

If children are involved and the couple has a financial settlement to arrange, the divorce can cost £1,000 and take as long as a year. When the couple holds as-sets in other countries, the case may take years and could cost thousands of pounds.

Under gradelines of old British family law, the amount that can be awarded to the wife when a couple splits is limited to one-third of the lassband's income As a result, the wife may get far less than she could be awarded in the United States.

Few people living abroad, Ma. Muinzer says, think enough about the future. For that reason, she has included informs tion about pensions and wills. British law and U.S. law are not necessarily compatible on the question of inheritance," Ma-Muinzer notes. Each time you move to a new country, she says, loses the case usually has to pay the husband, of a spouse who you should make a new will

A Frankfurt dancer performing "Artifact."

Forsythe: Ballet Sound and Flurry

By Anna Kisselgoff
New York Times Service EW YORK — The rule of thumb is that a choreographer orks best with his own company, the dancers with whom he is most familiar. There is no reason to doubt that the rule holds true as well for William Forsythe and the Frankfurt Ballet, the West German company headed by the American choreographer since 1984.

Nonetheless, one doesn't regret having seen the works produced by Forsythe in his freelance days chring the early 1980s, most notably "Time Cycle." "Love Songs" and "Say Bye-bye." These pieces were always well danced, and their everiveting emphasis was on Expressionist or pop imagery to treat a theme of alienation. Say Byebye," for instance, spectacularly used Elvis Prealey recordings and other elements of 1950s popular culture to offer a critique of that very culture. But if one looked behind the aggressively theatrical surface, it was obvious that a choreographer with a complex sense of formal substructure was at work

"Say Bye-bye," created in 1980, made its U.S. debut at the Pepsico Summeriare Festival in Purchase, New York, this month. Yet, even "Say Bye-bye" contained a clue to the ideas behind "Artifact." Both deal in disparate ways with how we perceive things around us, be it a social environment or the nature of language. More interestingly, both focus on a limited number of more—

Neither lmelda Staunton as the unlucky Gloria nor Henry Goodman as the appalling manager can attract our attention for long enough to give the production its true roots. An American sweat of desperate ambition and murderous failure has somehow been replaced by the sweeter English smell of amateur night at a local church hall.

At Stratford, Barry Kyle's rich and rare revival of "The Jew of sprawling sub-erotic fantasy about Maita" builds to a marvelously bloody and smoky conclusion, winding its jovial way through a Machiavellian plot of tortuous evil as the title character lurches from political intrigue to mass murder before finally being burnt alive in the pit he has himself dug out of a determination to destroy all other characters and religions in his path. Genet once said that he wanted Whether poisoning an entire convent or merely arranging for the conflagration of the Turkish Army, Alun Armstrong's Barabas is a caricature of racial intolerance surrounded by John Carlisle and an assembly of apparently upright Maltese knights who turn out at the last to be even more corrupt than the Jew himself.

N EW YORK —As they try on short skirts for the first time in years, working women are asking themselves hard questions. First, about how they look, next about how and where to wear them. "It's an issue I've faced," said

Dorothy Karlitz, a lawyer in the entertainment field. "Although I wear them in private life, a miniskirt is totally inappropriate in court. It takes away from what I'm doing."
But Risa G. Dickstein, another lawyer, said she can go short in court without offending propriety. "I started to get fantastic treat-ment," she said. "The court officers were a lot nicer." The down side of Dickstein's appeal in short skirts is the unwanted attention they tend to attract.

Using the most authentic of sources — the archives of the Paris Herald (former nickname of the International Herald Tribune) —she has sifted through literally thousands of pages of newsprint to bring readers an immense variety of information as well as reproductions of major time, articles, gossip columns, sports pages, turn-ofthe-century fashion news (for men and women) . . . even old-time comic strips and cartoons.

In day-to-day editions, the Paris Herald chronicled the decline of the old, existing order and caught the Belle Époque spirit of emerging modern life. It's history as you like it . . . with flair. fun and style. Order this beautiful book today . . . to keen or give.

turned nervous investors into sellers. Futures-linked selling exacerbated the losses.

The Dow slid 19.77 to 2,467.95. In early afternoon trading, it had been posting a gain.

Declines outpaced advances by about 11-5. Volume was about 186.57 million shares, up from 168.14 million Monday.

The market opened lower, but blue-chips soon pushed into the plus column and stayed there, posting modest gains, through early afternoon. Meanwhile, bond prices opened lower while the dollar, by early afternoon, was mixed. A rumor that the government would report a sharp rise in June consumer prices on Wednesday set off a midafternoon wave of selling in the bond market, as well as selling of the dollar in Stocks followed suit, and futures-linked selfing drove the Dow down more than 30 points before the blue-chip baromenter cut its loss by about one-third.

Economists have estimated that consumer prices rose between 0.3 percent and 0.4 percent But Trude Latimer, an analysi at Josephthal & Co., said that Tuesday's decline would definitely add to investors' nervousness.

"Everyone expects a pullback and the mindset is for the market to go lower," Ms. Latimer said. She said that selling could accelerate Wednesday and that the Dow could retreat to

Y&R Forms 3-Way Venture With Japan, Paris Partners

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

New York Times Service

EW YORK - Young & Rubicam's two joint ventures with foreign agencies have been merged to form a three-way venture whose other partners are Dentsu of Japan, the world's largest agency, and Paris-based Eurocom, the largest agency on the Continent. Y&R is America's

The result is HDM, with more than $1 billion in billings and 41 offices in 14 countries. The partners say they believe that makes it the world's 17th-largest agency.

The two agencies that merged were DYR, which was formed in 1981 with Dentsu and had been serving as Y&R's arm in Asia, and HCM, which resulted from the merger of Marsteller, a Y&R subsidiary, with Havas The new agency

Conseil, a Eurocom unit.
Tim Pollak, 41, the former head of DYR, will be president and chief executive of will have $1 billion in billings and 41 HDM. Robert Schmetterer, offices in 14 who headed HCM, will be a consultant to the company countries. while, he said, he is "looking at entrepreneurial possibilities."

The other chief officers of HDM are Alain de Pouzilhac, chairman and former head of HCM, Europe, and Shinzo Ueno, who will continue as executive vice president and area director in

In the United States, Eurocom and Dentsu will be majority owners; in Europe, Eurocom will be majority owner, and in Asia, Young & Rubicam and Dentsu will hold the lion's share.

The companies said that DYR had grown to $347 million in billings in 1984, from less than $100 million when it was founded, while HCM has gone to $720 million, from around $500 million.

In another merger, Ted Bates Worldwide and Backer & Spielvogel, both subsidiaries of Saatchi & Saatchi Co. of London, have joined forces. Carl Spielvogel, 58, chairman and chief executive of the company bearing his name, will carry the same titles at Backer Spielvogel Bates Worldwide. Donald M. Zuckert, 53, former chairman and chief executive of Bates, will become former chairman and chief executive of Bates, will become president and chief operating officer. William M. Backer, 60, will go from president of Backer & Spicivogel to vice chairman and executive creative director of the new firm.

The merged firm will be made up of two operating companies, Backer Spielvogel Bates in the United States and Ted Bates International overseas. It will have 104 offices in 46 countries and $2.7 billion in billings, and will be one of two worldwide Saatchi networks, the other being Saatchi & Saatchi Advertising Worldwide, created last month by the merger of Saatchi & Saatchi Compton and DFS Dorland Worldwide. The Saatchi & Saatchi parent is the world's biggest advertising holding company.

David M. Smick, 33, and Richard H. Medley, 35, partners in Smick & Medley & Associates, Washington-based economic consultants, are now additionally co-publishers of The International Economy magazine, which will be published six times a year. It will be what they consider to be a much needed "written forum for the international policy debate."

The first issue will be hand-delivered to delegates at the International Monetary Fund and World Bank meeting in Washington scheduled for Sept. 27 to Oct. 3, and mailed to others.

Circulation is expected to be 25,000.

Air Europe Wants Routes

LONDON -Air Europe, which claims to be Britain's fastest-growing carrier, said Tuesday that it plans to bid for the short-haul Euopean and domestic operations of British Caledonian Airways, the proposed merger partner of British armid indications that a free-for-all could develop as rivals try to carve up British Caledonian routes.

British Airways and British Caledonian, which announced their sur-prise £237 ($377 million) proposal last Thursday, reacted coolly to Air Europe's plan. "We hope to merge with the entire sirline," a British Airways spokesman said.

Air Europe said that any offer it made would include British Caledonian's routes, aircraft, facilities and staff from the hub at Gatwick Airport, and it would pay a premi-um above asset value equivalent to that British Airways has offered for the entire company.

Analysts estimated that the bid would be around £50 million. Air Europe's managing director, Peter Smith, said his airline had sent letters to the other airlines requesting sufficient financial information to make an offer. He said that if the bid were accepted, Air Europe would drop its opposition to the BA-British Cale-domian merger, which had been based on anti-competitive grounds.

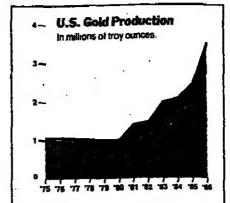

British Airways is already the world's largest airline on intercontinental routes, according to the International Air Transport Association, and is third in the trans-Atlantic market, analysts said. The merger, if it is approved would give BA from 84 to 100 percent of the traffic on British carriers between London and the cities of Amsterdam, Brussels, Copenha-gen, Frankfurt, Geneva, Munich, Paris and Zurich, according to Air Europe.

A Gold Boom in the Making

Production in the United States has surged, thanks to new technology, rising prices and buyers' disenchantment with South Africa, the world's No. 1 producer.

Gold Boom Tempts Giants to Give Up

Low-Cost Rivals, Dizzying Output Threaten Prices

By Jonathan P. Hicks
New York Times Service
NEW YORK — It is hard to find an executive in the gold mining business in North America who does not believe that "life right now is too good to be true." But what they mean by that de-pends on whether they think the current gold boom is sowing the seeds of the next bust.

William W. Reid, for example, chairman of Silver State Mining Corp., could not be more ebullient. And why shouldn't he be? His small company's stock is selling for 40 times earnings, an unusually high level.

His company's two gold mines in the mountains of Nevada will produce twice as much gold this year as last. And with gold selling for $440 an ounce, compared with about $280 three years ago, he is planning to open a third mine next year.

As strange as it may sound, those are the same reasons why executives at such big gold producers as Amax Inc. and Standard Oil Co. think it is high time to bail out of the business. Amax, the large Connecticut-based mining company, is await-ing approval from the Securities and Exchange Commission to spin off its gold mining subsid-

BP, U.K. Agree On £1.5 Billion Share Offering

By Nina Martin

LONDON - British Petroleum Co. PLC, heavily in debt from its terests of BP and the government. spring, said Tuesday that it will raise about £1.5 billion ($2.4 billion) in an unusual share issue timed to coincide with the sale of the government's remaining BP

Under the agreement, BP would sell the new shares to the government this fall, which would immediately resell them to the public along with its present 31.7 percent stake in BP.

The amount of stock issued would depend upon the per-share price set by the government, but would probably be near the current share price of around 400 pence. At that price, the government's stake in BP would rise to about 38.5 percent, and the public offer would raise about £8.5 billion, more than any other stock sell-off or privatization thus far.

BP closed Tuesday on the London Stock Exchange at 395 pence,

Analysts praised the agreement as an "elegant" and "clever" - but complicated - solution to challenges faced by BP and its largest shareholder as they try to coordinate the oil giant's business needs with government policy and poli-

It also creates a new role for the British government, from that of a seller of public companies to that of an arranger or broker.

To finance its $7.6 billion purchase in April of the 45 percent of Sohio it did not already own, BP borrowed £5 billion, raising its debt-to-equity ratio to about 50 from the low 30s, executives said.

The Sohio purchase came soon after the Conservative government's announcement that it would dispose of its remaining BP holdings of about 1.74 billion common

BP officials said Toesday that the company and its major institutional stockholders were uncomfortable with the high level of debt, but unwilling to reduce it by cut-ping Sohio of some assets.

The agreement is in the best inpurchase of Standard Oil Co. this said David Simon, the managing sprine, said Tuesday that it will director, adding that a separate BP rights issue "would have spoiled some of the market's appetite ahead of their sale."

Mr. Simon said that BP so far had managed to trim its debt from the Sohio purchase by about £1.5 billion. He said the new issue would reduce BP's debt-equity ratio to between 32 and 35.

BP's current shareholders will be given entitlements to receive the newly issued shares along with the government's shares on a prorated

BP officials refused to talk about how the new shares would be priced and analysts speculated that the government might be getting the shares for less than it will sell them. BP said that under the arrangement it would not have to pay any underwriting fees.

Analysts said that the arrangement will also give BP a large nest egg with which to mount an aggres-sive program of acquisitions, challenging other strong competitors such as Exxon Corp. and Royal Dutch/Shell Group.

One of the main purposes of the Sohio purchase was to press ahead with expansion in North America, vhere BP has a heavy stake in Alaska's North Slope.

"BP is placing themselves well for acquisitions," said Peter Nicol. oil analyst with Smith New Court Agency. "Today's news is not the last significant development that we'll see for BP."

In a separate announcement, BP said Tuesday that it will restructure its U.S. interests under seven divi-

ons. The divisions would be combined with BP's existing interests in the United States under a holding company, BP America Inc., based in Cleveland, Sohio's former head-

With the merger, BP's assets in the United States total about $23 billion, making BP America by far the group's biggest international subsidiary.

Stock Buyback

The Associated Press

LA JOLLA, California — Hendry Group, which went public 14 months ago after being spum off from Allied-Signal Inc. said Tuesday that it would buy back 24 percent of its stock for $700 million.

It also said it was seeking government permission to increase its stake in Chicago-based Santa Fe. Southern Pacific Corp. to 25 percent from 5 percent, a move that would cost the company about $1.66 billion at current prices.

Henley is composed of 35 construction, environment, energy, chamical, manufacturing and finance businesses. It has $1 billion in create on hand plus $2.5 billion in credit from a lender group headed by Mellon Bank to finance its sack repurchase and its bid for a further Santa Fe stake.

Tyndall Holdings Offers £214 Million for Clayton

LONDON - Tyndall Holdings PLC, a British investment management company, said Tuesday it had made a £214 million ($342 million) cash offer for Clayton Robard, an Australian financial Services group.

It said Clayton Robard's board welcomed the offer. The offer would mean issuing £31.8 million in Tyndall shares to institutions in exchange for Clayton Robard shares, Tyndall said.

This would give Typdall a 17.6 percent stake in Clayton Robard in addition to the 2.3 percent stake it already owns. There would also be a £142.7 million rights issue and bank loans of £53.3 million to acquire the remaining shares.

In Sydney, Clayton Roberd said Tyndall was offering 6.40 Australian dollars ($4.49) cash for each ordinary share and 9.60 dollars cash for each preferred equity share.

The Australian company confirmed that Tyndall holds an interest in ordinary shares amounting to 19.9 percent of its issued capital. Most of this interest was acquired Tuesday at the offer price in off-market transactions, it said.

Clayton said Tyndall planned to make the offer through a wholly owned Australian unit. The offer must be approved by Australia's Foreign Investment Review Board and is conditional on Tyndall getting a total interest in Clayton of at least 50 percent.

Late in the day, there was a rumor in the bond market that the consumer price index was going to be up 0.9 percent in June, said Joseph Volpicella, executive vice president of Spavo Financial Corp., a New York-based currency-trading firm.

That would definitely be inflationary and something the market fears the most," he said.

Mr. Volpicella was referring to the scheduled release Wednesday of the June consumer price index. Market forecasters have been papiecting a 0.3 percent to 0.4 perLondon Dollar Rates

As a result of the rumor, "some of the more nervous players may have decided to bail out of their long positions" on dollars, said Thomas Benfer, a commercial trad-

Mr. Volpicella and Mr. Benfer agreed that testimony by the Federal Reserve Board chairman, Paul A. Volcker, and his designated successor, Alan Greenspan, had little impact on the market

Mr. Volpicella described their ppearances as a "nonevent" and script type of thing." When asked about the recent rise in the value of the dollar against other currencies, Mr. Volcker said:

GOLD: As Supply Soars and Low-Cost Miners Multiply, the Giants Consider Bailing Out

By Michael Richardson

tional Herald Tribune KALGOORLIE, Australia — Machines gouging gold ore from the Gimlet South pit here, 165 feet (50 meters) below an arid plain dotted with gum trees, have exposed the narrow shafts of an old mine worked by men with picks and shovels in the early 1900s.

Those men were tracking rich veins at the height of Australia's last gold rush. Today, big dump trucks remove the other-colored ore from South Gimlet at a rate of 5,500 metric tons a week.

The pit, 40 miles (65 kilometers) from Kalgoorlie in Western Australia, is one of several in the Ora Banda gold project operated by Broken Hill Pty., the big Australian minerals, oil and steel company.

Ora Banda is typical of dozens of open-cat.

Australian mines that have been brought back into production since 1980 to exploit low-grade reserves of ore in and around old

Most of the high-grade deposits in those pats were mined in the gold rushes of the 1850s and early 1900s, when Australia was briefly the largest gold producer in the world. Ian Story, a director at the stockbrokerage BZW Meares Ltd. in Sydney, said that Australia was in the midst of a third gold rush, the result of new cost-effective mining methods and some major new gold finds in the past six

Another impetus is the recovery of world

gold prices in U.S. dollar terms and a decline in the value of the Australian dollar against the U.S. currency. James D. Shaw, the manager of the South

Gimlet pit, said that it cost less than 6 million Australian dollars ($4.2 million) to bring the mine back into operation in 1985. The Ora Banda project produced 27,000 troy ounces of gold in the year ended in May,

Mr. Shaw said. In the current year, managers hope to extract 46,000 ounces of gold from 600,000 metric tons of ore. Mr. Shaw estimated the cost of production at about 350 Australian dollars per ounce of gold, compared to a current market price of 625 Australian dollars. The surge in activity has lifted Australia's annual gold output from 18 metric tons in 1980 to 75 tons in 1986. In the same period, the number of producing mines climbed from about a dozen to more than 75. Foreign companies control about 20 percent of the Australian output

George Milling-Stanley, author of Gold 1987, an annual survey of the world gold industry by Consolidated Gold Fields PLC. predicted that Australian production would rise to more than 100 tons this year.

He ranked Australia as the fourth-largest gold producer in the non-Communist world in 1986, behind South Africa with 640 tons, the United States with 108 tons and Canada, with just over 107 tons. But according to Howard G. Walker, a precious metals analyst with the stockbrokers J.B. Were & Son in Melbourne, international investors remain skeptical about the Australian gold boom, comparing it with speculative fever over purported nickel discoveries around Kambalda, south of Kalgoorlie, in

When that bubble burst, many stockholders lost large amounts of money. But John Ouinn, executive director of Newmont Australia Ltd., noted that the 1970's nickel boom was based on an announcement of discoveries. By contrast, he said, the gold boom is founded on producing mines with proven reserves.

The upsurge has had a major impact on Australia's economy and financial markets. Gold is assuming a larger share of the exports Australia must sell abroad to reduce the chronic deficit in its balance of payments and to service foreign debt.

In 1986, gold was Australia's 10th-largest export, with the value of overseas sales increasing by 41 percent to 941 million dollars.

Australian stock exchanges have seen about 150 new listings and floats by gold exploration companies in the past several years, Mr. Walker said, bringing the number of explorers listed to about 400.

He estimated that about 10 percent would find sold in commercial quantities and that a few would have spectacular success. "The rest will go broke, merge or be taken over by

In testimony that was curiously devoid of drama, Mr. Volcker con-

The escalating price increases of the last few months could cause "serious problems" if they become embedded in the economy through increases in wages and in costs, Mr.

Even so, he amiounced Tuesday that the Fed's policymakers did not change their target ranges for money and credit growth for 1987 because they are satisfied that the increased pressure they placed on bank reserves in April and May had slowed money growth.

That slowing has prompted spec-ulation in the markets that the Fed was easing its money policy, an issue Mr. Volcker appeared to address when he said, "The approach put of South Africa, the world's day with a plea to Congress to keep dress when he said, "The approach the Fed independent from execu- of the Federal Reserve toward the

MUM AND MR. ARMITAGE

By Beryl Bainbridge. 144 pages. $15.95. McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1221 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N. Y. 10020.

Reviewed by Michiko Kakutani

HE postwar England depicted by Beryl Bainbridge in such quick, pointed novels as "The Bottle Factory Outing" (1975), "Injury Time" (1978) and "A Quiet Life" (1977) is a drab, depressing place where lives are circumscribed and expectations diminished. Families tend to be "the strength of the st tend to be the source of suffocation rather than sustenance; and romance, too, has a way of dwindling into comedy instead of blossoming into hope. In fact, most of the author's characinto hope. In fact, most of the author's characters live blankly with a vague cloud of menace hovering over their heads.

A similar mood and landscape can be found in the stories of this collection, "Mum and Mr. Armitage." The tennis courts where the ill-fated yappies in "Beggars Would Ride" meet for their twice-weekly games are full of potholes and surrounded by grounds strewn with broken glass and beer cans. The garden bebroken glass and beer cans. The garden be-longing to Margaret and Richard in "People for Lunch" is so tiny that their outdoor luncheon must take place alongside some unsa-vory garbage bins. And the building that fig-ures so prominently in "Helpful O'Malley" is one of those dark, clammy apartment houses in which coin-fed gas heaters supply insufficient

Obviously, such bleak settings are meant to mirror the emotional emptiness of the characters' lives. Nearly everyone in this collection suffers from alienation, loneliness or sup-pressed rage; not one has what could be considered a satisfying day-to-day existence or a sistaining relationship.

Reading these stories, it's clear that Bain-bridge has a dry, dark-humored wit as well as a sharp eye for incongruous details. She notices things like a woman's turban "printed all over with the heads of dogs" and the Christmas cards knocked off the mantlepiece by a fierce wind. But while her gift for irony has made for some maliciously comic novels, it tends, in the more compressed form of the short story, to result in implausible and overly tricked-up

To make matters worse, these stories share a severely limited image bank. At least three of them ("Mum and Mr. Armitage," Through a Glass Brightly" and "The Man Who Bles Away") feature similar scenes depicant trees. or flowers planted in ugly concrete tube; and two of them ("People for Lunch" and "The Worst Policy") use the same narrative set-up. in which an obnoxious teen-age boy harasses an adulterous couple. In the end, such repetitions do a disservice to Bambridge's negative agile talent Indeed, they contribute to the feeling that these stories are nearly at attenual ed as the world portrayed by the author.

method scored a striking success, though rather fortuitously, on the diagramed deal. North and South produced an abrupt auction.

North decided that she was willing to play a slam if her partner held at least two aces. She leaped from one diamond to four no-trump and heard her partner bid six hearts. She passed this, reasonably sure that her partner's void was in the heart suit.

This proved to be an exam

The Beast Again Mars The Spirited Beauty of South American Soccer

LONDON - There is more beauty, and considerably more beast, in the Latin than in other soccer species. This month's South American championship, the Copa America, gave the stage to Diego-Maradona & Co. They abused it, fouled it, corrupted it. Why should players born with such flair back so wilfully at each other? Why throttle the spirit of their game? King Diego himself asks why.

"This tournament should be for the South American to show his open, attacking style and ball play," he complained. "But Peru, Chile and Uruguay came only to avoid defeat. If time had been controlled as n basketball, only 40 to 50 minutes were played each match." Maradona's pleas for referee protection might have carried more weight had he turned up fully fit, or had his nation celebrated its anniversary as world champion by giving due priority to this event on Argentine soil. Instead, it succumbed without a goal in its first home defeat by Uruguay in 50 years, then surrendered third

The Argentines and Brazilians are tired of competing without season-al respite. Their stars earn fortunes in lira and pesetas, and the Copa. America has become small beer. But once those teams had been kicked off the stage, lacking in professional pride, surely Urngmay and Chile had ambitions for a final televised worldwide from Buenos Aires.

had ambitions for a final televised worldwide from Buenos Aires.

The sky was dull, the atmosphere humid, yet you would expect South Americans to handle that. You would expect younger Latins to parade their wares, if for no better reason than to catch an eye in far off, mosined lands. They know about Maradona lighting up Europe by inspiring Napoli to win the Italian League and Cup. They know about Hugo Sánchez, a supernormal scoring machine, reaping billions in Madrid. Sure, Maradona and Sánchez antagonize many with their insatiable greed and unreliability off the field. But so long as beauty transcends beast, so long as they win, the paymasters shrug with them, hug with them. It is when the star doesn't deliver that the world turns sour. Enzo Francescoli, third of the South American soccer gods, endured a first season with Racing Club de Paris embittered by relegation struggles and antipathy between himself and Racing's president. Nonetheless, Francescoli was Uruguay's ace in Buenos Aires. His long bones are sparsely cushioned by flesh; his runs are blindingly direct and daring; his claims for ill-treatment sometimes as theatrical as Maradona's. For 20 minutes, Francescoli mastered the finale.

But violence was in the air and at his shins. Within 15 minutes

The parting image was of a man dismissed for violence returning to receive the Copa America and the embrace of officialdom.

But violence was in the air and at his shins. Within 15 minutes Eduardo Gomez, a Chilean already sent off once in the tournament, was shown the red card for repeated lunges at Frances coli's thighs. Chile then sent in substitute hatchet man called, appropriately. Toro, and resumed the naked aggression. Francescoi probed for Chile's breaking point; Chile found his. After 28 minutes; Toro savaged Francescoi's teammate, Antonio Alzamendi, whereupon Francescoli retaliated and was ordered off.

The Uruguayans, who were not quite the things of 1986, met force with force and ground out victory. It came courtesy of Roberto Rojas, Chile's captain and reportedly brilliant goalkeeper. He berto Rojes, Chile's captain and reportedly brilliant goelkeeper. He badly mishandled a shot from José Perdoms, unmarked following a comer kick, and that allowed Pablo Bengoechea to strike.

A poor goal, a poor tournament. But with traces of beauty. Bengoechea, just 19, and Gustavo Maiosas, the 20-year-old son of a former international, are exciting Urugusyans. Chilean winger Ivo Bassy has pace and a beginning body swerve. Sadly, the example they set was spoiled by Urugusy's captain, Pendoms, 22. A linearian spotted him fighting with Fernando Astengo and they became the 13th and 14th players sent off in the 13 games. Moments later Perdoms was back, contempictorious at the swe of protunning pandernomium. aptein victorious at the eye of rapturous penderronium.

The parting image was of a man dismissed for violence returning to receive the Copa America and the embrace of officialdom. It symbolized the way Latins now control world soccer, shrugging off the laws and the spirit of the sport.

Next to Perdoma danced Francescoli, a star who had become a spectator. Francescoli has an observant mind. He says the Argentines and Urugusyans have techniques rarely equaled in Europe, skills that "mould be more amount if our countries had better socio-economic. conditions." I disagree Imagination is free, even in the back streets and shanties that television and modern coaching cannot reach. However, the professional game bleeds to death. Some months ago the players of Bella Vista in Uruguay claimed that they had not been paid for months and could not afford bus fares to and from work. So they pitched tents around the training field. And within such economic ruin South America still produces the most thailing individualists. It also begets the opposite.

Two years ago corrupt men inside the Chilean federation threatened the existence of organized soccer there. Now Chile is preparing to host FIFA's world youth championship in October. Heaven forbid that this tournament carries on where the one in Buenos Aires just left off, contaminating young players and emptying stadiums.

Not that youth needs great wealth to corrupt it. At about the same time as the professionals were misbehaving in Buenos Aires, a team of young Argentines was disgracing itself in eastern Europe. Jorge Sarmiento, a goalkeeper enraged by defeat against Britain, butted the referee in the face. He was told he will not be welcome at the World

That ban might give Sarmiento time to write a thesis on, say, the violence that flaws the skilled Latin footballer.

Don Mattingly, who tied the major-league record for putouts in a nine-inning game, got 1 of his 22 by running down the Twins' Steve Lombardozzi between home and third base.

Mattingly Ties Another Mark, But This Time With His Glove

MINNEAPOLIS - Don Mattingly, who must wait five years after he retires to be nominated for baseball's Hall of Fame, already has won a place there for his bat, and now for his glove.

Mattingly, who Saturday matched a major league record by hitting a home run for an eighth consecutive game, Monday night tied a record for most putouts in a nine-inning game during the New York Yankees' 7-1 unumph over the Minnesota Twins.

Starting pitcher Tommy John induced the Twins to hit into 23 ground outs, with Mattingly makng the put out on 22.

Another record. Just what I need," Mattingly said, smiling, "With two outs in the ninth, I saw it on the board and I couldn't believe it.

"I'm really not doing anything on those, just catching the ball," he added. "The credit goes to Tommy." The credit goes to Tourny. The Hall of Fame had asked Mattingly to donate the bat he used to tie Daie Long's home run record. Now it wants his glove, too. "I don't know if I can give that up yet," Mattingly said. The bat, he added, "that's ready to go. It's got a few chips on it."

The last player to record 22 put-outs in a nine-inning game was Er-nie Banks of the Chicago Cubs in 1963. The first to accomplish the feat were Thomas Jones of the St. Louis Browns and Hal Chase of the ankees, both in 1906.

Mattingly Aggravates Injury to Wrist

MINNEAPOLIS — As Don Mattingly walked to the showers Monday night after his record-tying game be held his right hand with his left hand and the Yankees held their breath. He had gone zero-for four, ending his streak of extra-base hits at an American League record 10 straight games, and had aggravated an injury to his right wrist.

Manager Lou Piniella said Mattingly could miss "several games."

Mattingly offered no prognosis but said that "it hurts to swing" and "it hurts to catch." He was to have the wrist and hand examined Tuesday. Mattingly estimated that, 10 to 12 times each season, he swings his bat and pain shoots through his right hand and into his right wrist. He said that Monday night "it didn't really affect me. I could still make the plays." But at bat he couldn't reach the outfield, much less the fences. He grounded out twice, lined out once and struck out. "It just happened like it has other times," he said. "But this time it

"Not as surprised as you guys," he said. "I work hard at what I do. I've worked for 25 years to get here." "Tommy wasn't fooling anybody," said the Twins' third baseman, Gary Gaetti. "He was just throwing his pitches and we were just hitting them into the ground. It's kind of irritating that you never really get one good thing to hit. It's amazing, John said a slow sinker threw the Twins off balance. "It's a pitch," he aid, "that was a doofer. A doofer is a pitch that'll do till you get a better

Braves 2: In New York, Don Schulze, a hard thrower who has been in and out of the majors the last four years, held Atlanta to three hits for 616 innings and walked with the bases loaded to force in a run. Schulze got his first start for the Mets because the team's latest casualty, Terry Leach, who has an 8-0 record, tore cartilage in his right knee and was put on the 15-day disabled list.

Reds 10, Phillies 6: In Philadel-phia, right fielder Glenn Wilson's throwing error allowed Nick Esasky to score the go-ahead run in four-run 11th for Cincinnati, which rallied from a six-run deficit for the sixth time this season.

Padres 7, Cubs 4: In San Diego. Carmelo Martinez drove in the goahead run with a single and John Kruk laid down a successful squeeze bunt during a four-run seventh that beat Chicago.

They must know something the only one certainty; to wit, that in Iran good sense will never prevail

Long before reflagging was in-vented, Iran regularly blasted Ku-waiti tankers in the Persian Gulf. This was not pure Iranian nasti-ness. Kuwait's big oil money helps pay for Iraq's war against Iran. You can see how Iranians might feel justified in blasting the tankers.

So look what we have: After losing tankers because it sides with Iraq. Kuwait persuades the United States to put U.S. flags on Kuwaiti ships, so that Iranian attackers will hereafter be attacking U.S. tankers, thus knocking the chip off President Reagan's shoulder.

Producer Martin Bregman, Movie Juggler

By Stephen Farber New York Times Service

OS ANGELES - These are L frustrating days for a movie producer. Hundreds of scripts are put into development by the studios, but nervous executives postpone the start of production as long as possible. When the day finally approaches for the studio to commit $15 million to film the script and another $10 million to market the film, the easiest decision is to drop the project. And so the producer who has nurtured the project for a couple of years must begin again shopping it around town, hoping that the end of the journey will not be another

With several profitable pictures to his credit, Martin Bregman is one of Hollywood's more successful and vigorous producers. Yet even he has to keep a dozen projects in development at half a dozen studios if he is to make one film every year or two. During the last 15 years Bregman has pro-duced "Serpico," "Dog Day Af-ternoon," "The Four Seasons" and "Scarface." But his last picture, Alan Alda's "Sweet Liberty," was a box-office disappoint-ment, and his newest, "Real ment, and his newest. Men," a comedy about CIA shenanigans that stars John Ritter and Jim Belushi, had its release date postponed until late September amid rumors of editing problems. So that means Bregman has to hustle that much more frantically just to stay affoat.

On a typical day in his office not long ago. Bregman had an early morning meeting with Mi-chael Apted, the director of one of his upcoming films. After that, Bregman fielded calls from Al Pacino about two more movies on his agenda, from an agent who wanted to discuss a rewrite of the Apted project, from another agent pitching a script for still another project. Then Bregman rushed to the set of "Real Men" to make sure that the first-time director, Dennis Feldman, was staying on schedule.

Later, he would learn that the Apted project, which he had hoped to start filming this summer, would have to be postponed at least until next spring. But Bregman still has a new Alan Alda film set to begin shooting in

"I had enormous problems getting 'Serpico' and 'Dog Day Afternoon' made," Bregman says.
"But it seems to be getting harder. I can't change the way I think or the kind of material I'm attracted to. How do you spend years in-volved in something you really don't believe in? My 14-year-old goes to see a lot of junk. I would like him to see some serious things, to know what the real world is like. He can't watch cartoons for the rest of his life, and that seems to be the direction we're heading in."

"The Shadow" is Bregman's one broad-brush film, with Ben Cross signed to star as the dapper crime-fighter Lamont Cranston. Tapping the Source," the Michacl Apted film, is the story of a young man fighting to expose a drug ring in a surfing community in California. Pacino will star in a remake of the hard-edged caper film "Rififi" and also in "Vito,"

"If you're growing things, it's important to have many different projects in the nursery.

Despite the frustrations of functioning as a producer today, Bregman has has survived partly because of his toughness and tenacity and partly because he's won the loyalty of high-powered actors and directors. "Most producers put on an act," says Michael Caine, who co-starred in "Sweet Liberty." They say, Look, ma, I'm producing, but they conveniently have a phone call at the office whenever it's ing on the set. Bregman was actually there all the time. He's very efficient without all the noise and bluster that you get from so many producers. He's like a duck, very calm on the surface but pad-

Bregman admits that he frehis directors and actors, but his co-workers rarely feel that he is: making waves just to demonstrate who's boss. "Marty is one of the best producers I've worked with, says Brian De Palma, who directed "Scarface." "He has a very strong point of view, but when he feels strongly about something, he's often right. He does not become obtrusive just to exercise his

Alda feels that Bregman's combative street-lighter's personality can be traced to his background. Years ago Marty had an insur-ance business; and he was also an agent," Alda points out, "He knows people very, very well in the way that a successful salesperson often knows human nature. He knows how people behave and he can spot the bull. That helps him to be useful to a writer or director. He'll tell you when something doesn't ring true."

In the decade before he started producing, Bregman worked as a successful manager, and he repre-

Barbra Streisand and Faye Dunaway early in their careers. But he grew tired of playing nursemaid to gifted but insecure actors, "I had worked with actors most of my life." Bregman says, "and it wasn't fon for me any-more. Most actors start in their lives being brutalized by everybody. It's a world of rejection, coupled with an mability to pay your telephone bill or your rent. So actors are very fragile and vulnerable. And dealing with inso-cure people is hard."

In searching for a new career path, Bregman decided that he could produce movies as well as some of the entrepreneurs he had

When he read Peter Mass's book "Serpico," the story of a New York policemen who exposed corruption in his department, Bregman optioned it for his first movie, Pacino, one of his former clients, starred in that film and in other Bregman produc-

All of his co-workers testified that one of Bregman's greatest strengths was his gift for casting and for handling actors on the set. As Alda says, "You have to ne-member that Marry became a successful manager by taking on peo-ple nobody had ever heard of. These people became stars, but they were not stars when he began to represent them. He has a very good eye for talent, and I still rely on him for interesting casting

"Marty is very good with casting." De Palma confirms, "and he is also very good at fielding his way through the egos of certain actors. I think that comes from managing complicated and diffi-cult personalities for so many

Perhaps because he has learned that actors will follow a good script rather than a favorite producer. Bregman has also become a passionate believer in good writing. "To me the most important thing in a film is the screenplay," Brogman says. "And it's the thing that is so easily destroyed when you're doing the film. It's insure when a script is rewritten on the set. On my films no line is allowed to be changed unless I'm there PEOPLE

Kennedy Clan Turns Out In Gold Star Mother Fits The Kennedy clan turned on The Kennedy clan turned on Monday to open a park in Boston dedicated to Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy, who turns 97 on Wednesday, and other Gold Star mothers. The $700,000 project features a rose garden within a one-acre park, and a fountain. Mrs. Kennedy's first son Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., died on a combat mission during World War II, where the Gold Star content originated to recognize mothers. cept originated to recognize moth ers who lost offspring in war.

Any Carter, daughter of former President Jimes Carter, is getting support from her parents after be ing dismissed from Brown University at Providence, Rhode Island. "She is 19 years old and makes her own decisions," Carter and his wife, Rosalyan, said Monday, Anny, a sophomore, may apply for readmission after a year. Amy and 14 others, including Abbie Holfman, were arrested in November at the University of Massachusetts at the University of Massachusettes Amherst while protesting activities of the Central Intelligence Agency They were acquitted of meanor charges.

Christo, the artist famed for wrapping landstapes and buildings in vast swatts of material, unveil details of his plan to cover miles of land in Japan and California with huge umbrellas. The $8 million project, which he hopes to carry out in 1990, would involve placement of 1,500 umbrellas on each side of the Pacific Ocean. The umbrellas would remain in place for three weeks, he said in Tokyo. Christo envisions yellow umbrellas 18 feet high and 24 feet in diameter stretching 16 miles along a California valley. In Japan, blue umbrellas the same size would cover 12 miles of a forested valley in Ibaraki pre-

Emperor Hirobito will travel in October to Okinawa, the only prefecture in southwestern Japan that he has not officially visited since the end of World War II, an Imperial Household Agency official said Tuesday. The emperor visited all other prefectures between 1946 and 1954, but Okinawa was excluded because it was under U.S. occup. tion. Okinawa reverted to Japan in 1972. Hirohito visited it in 1921 when he was crown prince.
